together and reamended the bill for the second time. And the Judiciary adopted those amendments. After Judiciary adopted it the bill was voted out. After which ten more amendments were adopted, or suggested by the opposition to this bill. Namely the landlords. And after those ten amendments were offered they came in with four more amendments. And now at the last minute we have all these amendments thrown up against this bill. After the bill is sitting around for one year, which I think is about the best example for a lack of faith I've ever seen in the four years I've been out here. So I think one more week in the session that is yet to go as long as we have is not too much for the people who basically want some decent legislation for the 35 or 40% of the state. The populous who are tenants would be none too mucy. If it can't be worked out maybe the bill should be killed, I might support Senator Carpenter, if we've got bad legislation. I don't want bad legislation. But I have faith in the members of this body that if you get out of their way and if you have a little faith in them that hopefully they can work out a bill that will be beneficial to all interest of the state.

PRESIDENT: Well, the motion before us actually is to bracket 293 for one week. And that is simply the motion. Either for or against. Senator Carpenter.

SENATOR CARPENTER: Well let me say to Senator Stahmer. I'd rather have a dirty brain than no brain at all. Now this thing has been laying around and Senator Stahmer gives the best argument why it shouldn't be postponed. There's amendments after amendments. And let me say again I'm a landlord. I'm not without interest. As I said the other day. And we're willing to attempt as landlords to do anything we can believe. But this bill is go confusing, it's worse than a goldbird puzzle. And there is no way by which the human mind can put it together to make it acceptable. To make it fair. To make it equitable. To make it enforceable. If you pass this bill in it's present form or an amended form, probably, there isn't any court in the world that would uphold it. And I see no reason to delay it. Now if the Senator wants to be reasonable for a couple days. I'll go along with him. A week, no.

PRESIDENT: Now, Senator Stahmer do you care to respond.

SENATOR STAHMER: I'm willing to accept the compromise of .. I just don't know how soon the people who really and truly are interested, and are on both sides can--get together. Thursday, or Friday. I'm not sure if we can get it done. It's alright by me if I thought the people could all get together. I'd agree to hearing it tomorrow. But I'm not sure how fast they can get together.

SENATOR CARPENTER: Now, one reason I made the motion, I read this mornings paper that the people for the bill said it ought to be killed. It doesn't make sense any longer.

SENATOR STAHMER: Well, the say it was redrafted by one side after they had agreed three times to compromise is that they said they could live with and they change it for the fourth time, that's quite a thing to have to accept.

SENATOR CARPENTER: Well, anyway I would agree to Friday, if Senator..it's Senator Simpson's bill of course and. He ought to have something to say about it.
